

Curriculum Vitae

Prof. Dr. Dr. h. c. Eduardo Demetrio Crespo

Full Professor of Criminal Law

University of Castilla-La Mancha (Toledo, Spain)

Editorial Note - Springer

Eduardo Demetrio Crespo is Full Professor of Criminal Law at the University of Castilla-La Mancha (Toledo, Spain) and was a Fellow of the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation at the University of Cologne (Germany). He has undertaken research stays at several universities and research institutions in Germany, the United Kingdom (Institute of Criminology, University of Cambridge) and Italy (European University Institute, Florence). His current research focuses primarily on the interdisciplinary relationship between neuroscience, artificial intelligence, and criminal law. He has served as Principal Investigator of three national research projects in this field, most recently “Neuro-Human Rights and Criminal Law” (PID2023-149978NB-I00). He is a member of the Board of Springer’s Legal Studies in International, European and Comparative Criminal Law, the Expert Panel of the Centre for Neurotechnology and Law (London), and the International Research Center for Criminal Law Sciences LMU-Iberoamerika (Munich). He is also a founding member of the Ibero-American Network of Neurolaw and Neuroethics.